FOREWORD

With the appearance of this index, a reference guide to twenty-five years of Interpretation is available. The earlier index covered the first decade of publication, 1947-1956 (Vols. I-X). This one brings the work forward from 1957 through 1971 (Vols. XI-XXV). Since the index for 1947-1956 is still available from the office of Interpretation, subscribers can secure a valuable guide to a quarter century of the Journal's resources.

This index contains two guides to the material in Volumes XI through XXV. The first is a list of authors with the titles of their articles. The list is easily scanned and offers a way to survey the content of the fifteen volumes. With attention to the titles, the reader can locate material of interest quickly. The second guide is an exhaustive list of all biblical texts interpreted, discussed, and cited. It will identify resources relevant to the study of a particular text quickly.

In recent years there have been numerous requests for an up-to-date supplement to the first index. The need has been obvious. But the concern and persistence of one person has made its appearance possible. Arlene Jones, the editorial assistant of Interpretation, has proposed, planned, prepared, and published this volume. Users who profit from it owe her their gratitude.
